Early childhood is important in the economic recovery of the country.

APPROVAL OF MINUTES
Cabinet members received copies of the April minutes before the meeting. Chairman Moore entertained a motion on the April minutes.

MOTION:
It was moved by John Wilson and seconded by LeEtta Felter that the Cabinet board approve the minutes of April 24, 2020. Motion carried. The minutes were approved as written.

BRIGHT SPOTS
Chairman Moore introduced Dr. Duane Whitbeck, Chairman of Family and Consumer Sciences Department at Pittsburg State University. Dr. Karla Wiscombe, KBOR invited Dr. Whitbeck to talk to the Children’s Cabinet about the new program at PSU in Early Childhood Unified Program and Licensure.

Dr. Whitbeck discussed his background and talked about the Early Childhood Unified (ECU) birth to kindergarten program and ECU key faculty at PSU.

- PSU has had a Preschool laboratory in conjunction with its Early Childhood Development program since 1965.
- PSU enhanced its curriculum and expanded courses offered to be equal to best practices for preparing Early Childhood Education Professionals in 1997
- Family and Consumer Sciences Early Childhood Development graduates have applied for Four-Year Old At-Risk Preschool positions and have been found to be the most qualified for the positions.
• Over 450 students graduated from the program and approximately 80 percent graduated with a major in Early Childhood Education and minor in Early Childhood Special Education.

• The ECU Birth to Kindergarten program is also offered in conjunction with a program in China.

Melissa thanked Dr. Whitbeck for his work in obtaining articulation agreements with the community colleges for this program and appreciated seeing how the program fits with the All In For Kansas Kids philosophy.

LeEtta Felter asked Dr. Whitbeck if he was seeing much diversity for the students going through this program and was there anything that could be done to intentionally recruit for a diverse workforce in this area. Dr. Whitbeck responded he was not seeing a lot of diversity. PSU has been recruiting from Kansas City Kansas Community College and various other places. In terms of diversity, they are able to recruit only a half of dozen students per year to enroll into the program. LeEtta encouraged the Cabinet to seek out ways to encourage and inspire students of color to pursue a major in Education so that we see more diversity in our teaching staff.

John Wilson asked whether students are learning about state or federal advocacy and how federal advocacy impacts the classes that they will be teaching in. Dr. Whitbeck replied yes, he teaches graduate level advocacy courses. Although the program fuses some advocacy coursework at the undergraduate level, it is not done as a central piece of their curriculum. John remarked that KAC would be happy to partner with the PSU program to help provide advocacy training to students and faculty.

Senator Dinah Sykes remarked about recently reading an article that encouraged diversity in curriculum and literature written for children. She wanted to see more diversity in kids’ books. Dr. Whitbeck responded absolutely. There has been a big shift in showing more diversity in children’s literature in recent years.

KCCTF has the responsibility to assess, review and evaluate the uses of CIF monies. The CIF accountability process was created to collect critical information to support Children’s Cabinet board in making recommendations to the governor and legislature.

This year, the accountability process includes collecting data from the CIF programs, Our Tomorrows, the All In For Kansas Kids Strategic Plan, Early Childhood Systems Building Needs Assessment, and the Comparison Report.

Mr. Owen Cox presented information categorized by funding by agency, programs profiles and primary populations. He talked about the Our Tomorrows COVID-19 analysis.
